

Mognori Village

Awal says he never fancied himself as a dancer, but in the shuffling motion of the dungo, a local dance performed at Mognori Village for the occasional inquisitive tourist, he has found a form of liberation. So with nothing else to do on that hot Thursday afternoon, he turned up, purple cloth over his shoulder, with fellow-villagers doing the shuffle. Words can't really capture the feeling generated by watching village residents dancing for just that one person, just you, the traveller.
